

Support and solidarity with the Baltic States

The Nordic Countries played an active and not insignificant role, when the Baltic States regained their independence after the cold war. Historically, there have been close cultural, economic and political ties between the Nordic and Baltic States. The relations between Labour Organizations in the two regions have also always been strong.

This is why SAMAK is deeply concerned about the security and energy challenges that the Baltic States are facing. There is a need for measures that can lower tension and build confidence.

SAMAK underlines the importance of common Nordic and European support and solidarity with the Baltic States in this serious situation.
